

The Journal of Sustainable Dermatology in Practice 2024 Vol 1 No 1 pp 11-22, DOI: 10.5750/jsdp.v1i1.2172

ENVIRONMENTAL SUSTAINABILITY IN CURETTE AND CAUTERY SKIN SURGERY: A QUALITY IMPROVEMENT PROJECT ON SINGLE-CENTRE TRANSFORMATION TO SUSTAINABLE PRACTICES

*Simon Tso**

*Dermatology, South Warwickshire
University NHS Foundation Trust,
Warwick, CV34 5BW,
United Kingdom;
School of Medicine, Cardiff
University, Cardiff, Wales, CF10
3AT, United Kingdom*

Tracey Williamson

*Dermatology, South Warwickshire
University NHS Foundation Trust,
Warwick, CV34 5BW,
United Kingdom*

Mi Joo Choi

*Dermatology, South Warwickshire
University NHS Foundation Trust,
Warwick, CV34 5BW,
United Kingdom*

Becky Seeley

*Dermatology, South Warwickshire
University NHS Foundation Trust,
Warwick, CV34 5BW,
United Kingdom*

Enenche Edache

*Dermatology, South Warwickshire
University NHS Foundation Trust,
Warwick, CV34 5BW,
United Kingdom*

Rosie Hillson

*Centre for Sustainable Healthcare,
Oxford, OX2 7DL, United Kingdom*

Rachel McLean

*Centre for Sustainable Healthcare,
Oxford, OX2 7DL, United Kingdom*

ABSTRACT

In this sustainability quality improvement project, we proposed a new lean pathway for performing curette and cautery minor skin surgery and evaluated our project's social, patient, economic, environmental and population outcomes.